

UCLA Physics & Astronomy Department Theoretical Particle Physics

The Department of Physics and Astronomy at UCLA invites applications and nominations for a tenure track or tenured faculty position in theoretical particle physics, starting in September, 2008, in the areas of collider physics, physics beyond the Standard Model and strong interactions, including perturbative, non-perturbative and computational aspects. We are seeking candidates with an outstanding record of past accomplishments and exceptional promise for future growth in research, as well as excellent teaching skills. Salary is commensurate with education and experience.

Applicants should submit a Curriculum Vitae, a list of publications, a brief description of research interests and goals and should have three letters of reference sent directly to:

Office of the Chair
Attn: Theoretical Particle Physics Search
UCLA Department of Physics and Astronomy
